/In this article the author seeks to determine the identity of each of the bands of people who have been thought to be or once to have been Dorobo. Most of his cultural and linguistic evidence was based upon original observations and interviews with Dorobo and Masai. He also gives some cultural data, three short word lists and a few folk-tales. --Analyst/

[illegible] This very brief article contains some information on a variety of Southern Dorobo living on the north-east side of the Aberdare range in the vicinity of Fort Hall, called by a Kikuyu name and believed to be of the Ogiek clan. After a brief discussion of the above group, the author presents a listing of Dorobo (Ogiek) clans, followed by an alphabetical vocabulary list of the Dorobo, Kikuyu and Masai languages. A note on a nomadic Dorobo clan of hunters called the Gi Wagogwete, and a brief vocabulary list of their language collected by Mr. Arthur Simpson, conclude the article. --Analyst/

/This source presents a thorough analysis of Dorobo social organization, with emphasis on kinship terminology and relationships. The field work for this study was undertaken by the author, a professional anthropologist, under a Leverhulme Research Fellowship, between May 1938 and November 1939 in the Dorobo "districts" of Kaipai, Kipkenyon and Sambiya.

In addition to the social organizational aspects of Dorobo ethnography, the author also discusses relations between the government and the Dorobo, clans, settlements, personal characteristics, and economic life. Two tables of Dorobo relationship terms and a map of the area conclude the work.--Analyst/
